Description

Arthur Willett British 1868 -1951. Willett was a renowned landscape artist who settled in Brighton but his paintings of the British countryside and country pursuits are highly sought after. He exhibited at least 7 times at The Royal Academy.

This is a very nice late 19th-century English huntsman on horseback with their hounds out fox hunting. Willett often painted in watercolor but this is a rare oil on canvas.

The piece is framed in an English gold swept frame.
