Description

19th century English impressionist scene of the Barbizon forest, near Paris France, with a river, cows, and trees.

Boyle was a pioneering 19th-century British artist inspired by European Impressionist painters.

The influence of the French Barbizon school is very evident in his work.

This is a rare example of the artist's work as he mostly painted small-scale English landscapes.

He often rejected the studio environment to paint 'En Plein Air' creating his characteristic atmospheric impressionist studies of the British landscape.

This is an oil on canvas.

It has been framed in an outstanding Vintage French Style giltwood frame.

He is recorded as living in London and had other works exhibited at:

Royal Academy, Royal Society of British Artists, Royal Society of Oil Painters.
